

THE LAST MANGO CRUISE

You Had to Be There!

It was a lovely cruise, according to the five couples who won Jimmy Buffett's Last Mango in Paris Contest. Who could ask for more than to spend three days in the Tropics with Jimmy—especially if those three days happen to fall during Key West's Carnival week, Fantasy Fest?

But it seemed like such a shame that ALL the Parrot Heads couldn't join in the good times—so there's The Coconut Telegraph's Christmas present to you: a look at the photo highlights of that crazy weekend in Margaritaville.

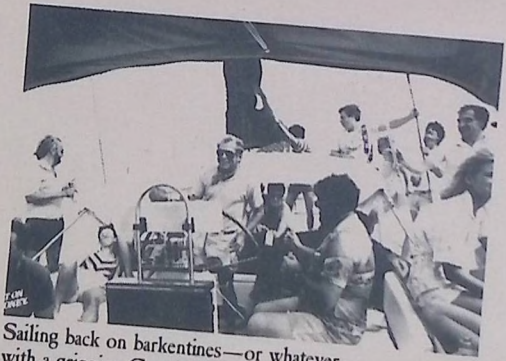

Where's the party? Well, it starts in Miami, as the lucky winners meet Jimmy Buffett for the first time.

The weather is here, and our winning couples are certainly beautiful as they assume true Parrot Head garb.

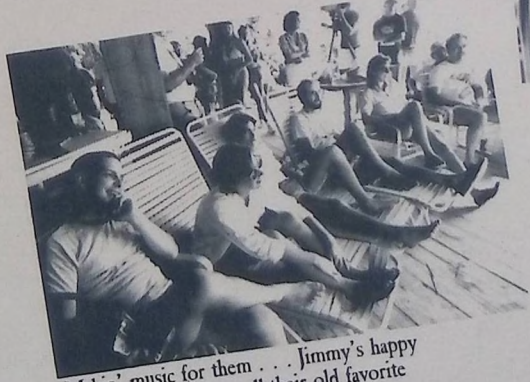

On safari with a couple of African friends presenting a—er—wild animal show during dinner at a fine local restaurant.

Sailing back on barkentines—or whatever—with a grinning Captain Buffett at the helm, headed for a picnic of cheeseburgers in paradise.

Margaritaville's son of a sailor blissfully steers a true course across Mother Ocean.

Makin' music for them . . . Jimmy's happy guests listen raptly to all their old favorite songs—and a few new tunes.

It may not be Halloween in Tijuana, but Fantasy Fest in Key West is just as good. Jimmy and Captain Tony lead the Grand Parade in the Last Mango float.

Wasted away again at The Margaritaville Store after a wild shopping spree and photo session—complete with Bloody Marys.

It was a pleasure and a hell of a weekend . . . a smiling Jimmy recalls the good times he had showing the Parrot Heads his town. (all photos courtesy of Henry Diltz—thanks, Henry!)

Jimmy and his guitar are the perfect partners for a lazy afternoon concert on a lush private island.

Yes, you can still order from Jimmy Buffett's Caribbean Soul T-shirt Line.
